W. P. WALTON.

Woman's Faith.

They were lovers. All the romance and sentiment of the world was theirs. There is something unfathomable in this thing called love. It tyrannizes over body and soul as no other feeling can. It creates happiness from the greatest sorrow, light from the deepest darkness. It builds such castles as money can not buy, and it binds stronger than any chains forged by human hands.

Through her tears as they parted shone such a light of love that he almost dared call her wife. She knew that she was loved in return, and that knowledge created a faith in her heart, which was to endure even to the gates of Heaven and beyond.

"In a year!" he whispered as he left her.

And she answered:

"I will wait a year—a lifetime!"

When a year had passed and no word came from him they tried to shake her faith by creating doubts. Men had no constancy, they sneered; men would wring a woman's heart and have no pity. Tears came to her brown eyes, but again she answered:

"He will come back to me!"

When the one year had become five the old sailors in the taverns and lofts shook their heads and said to each other that the ship had surely been lost and that the young captain would never be heard of more. Wives felt a pity for the heart longing and waiting through such uncertainty, and they whispered that it would be no use to love again.

"I shall see him again—he will surely return!" was the answer of Faith, with her sorrowful face and aching heart.

The five years became ten. The brown hair was streaked with gray, and the girl's fair face had become the face of a woman who carries a sobbing, waiting misery in her heart. Men showed their cruelty by seeking to awaken a new love; women exhibited their bitterness of heart toward their own sex by ridiculing her faith. But the light of never-dying heroism burned in her eye as she answered them:

"He gave me the promise—I am watching for his ship."

And the two years became twenty. Men and women had gone to their last rest until scarcely one was left who remembered when the lost ship sailed or who was her captain. But there were children who had heard the story, and as they smoothed down the gray hairs with their soft hands, they whispered:

"It is so sad! And he was lost at sea?"

"Yes!" she answered. "Aye! even though the whole world told me so, I would wait and watch for him!"

And the twenty years became thirty. One night when the storm vexed seas lashed the shore in fury and men uttered brief prayers to God as they turned their faces upon the ships making a brave fight for life, Faith lay dying.

The end had come. A human heart, troubled and bruised and scarred by waiting in vain—by hoping, to be ever disappointed—was about to be still. For a moment the storm lulled, just as a man draws a long breath before dashing into some great peril. As it screamed and roared again in its vengeance, Faith lifted her thin hand and whispered:

"He is coming back to me! I shall see him again and hear his voice once more."

The nurse moved nearer and whispered kind words, but Faith waived her aside and cried out:

"Do not come between us! I hear his footsteps—he is here! I loved him, and my reward has come at last! Let me clasp his hand—let me look into his eyes!"

And again the storm lulled, until the gale died into a sob and whispers, and the roar of the surf sounded miles away. Before the fury gathered itself for a fresh attack, two spirits passed out of the old home hand in hand and were afar on the path to Heaven. She listened and his footfalls had echoed in her ears. She had watched, and her gazed eyes had at last been gladdened. She had waited, and he had come to be with her through the perils of the dark valley.

Georgia seems to have repented of its prohibition mood, if the latest returns of Tuesday's election are clear indications of the general result. Our correspondent says that wherever the people have had a fair chance to express their sentiments prohibition has suffered. The "wet" ticket carried Atlanta, which has been for quite a while under prohibition rule. (N. Y. World.)

THE AMERICAN LUCILLE.—It was summer. And Long Branch. He came there. We met. He was handsome and hasty, and I acquiesced. He proposed. I refused him. I loved him. But then I thought—don't you see?—he would ask me again. But he didn't.—(Life.)

The usual course of a sailing vessel from New York to San Francisco is 15,855 miles. By way of Panama it is 6,000 miles and a month's time.

RELIGIOUS.

—There are 63,910 Protestant ministers in this country and 9,821,201 church members.

—The Episcopal Church will celebrate the centennial anniversary of its formal organization in 1889.

—Monsignor Capel denies that he has been guilty of any immoral conduct in California or elsewhere.

—According to the year book the average age of the Baptist preachers who died in 1884 was seventy-six years and seven months.

—Mr. Talmage says he has lost but a single Sabbath's work from sickness since he commenced his pastoral work about thirty years ago.

—The Union Baptist church in Franklin county, Mass., excluded one of her members for voting the whisky ticket on the day of the election.

—An effort is being made to get the Rev. George O. Barnes' Combination back to Lexington and the Court-House will probably be secured for him to preach in.

—Elder Joseph Ballou returned from Nicholas county yesterday, where he held a 12 days' meeting with the church at East Union, which resulted in 23 additions, 25 by confession.

—The Louisville Southern Methodist Conference has 78 parsonages, 196 preachers; 370 churches and 36,190 members, of whom 29 are colored. Baptists for the year were 810 infants and 2,405 adults.

—Eld. G. W. Yancey preached his first sermon of the protracted meeting to be held at the Christian church, Sunday night and will further notice preach at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and at 7 o'clock in the evening. He is a man of much ability and stands high as a revivalist.

—Eld. Martin Owens writes that he and Bro. Shackelford held a few days' meeting at Walnut Grove which resulted in one addition; a nine-days' meeting at Freedom with 9 confessions; another at Boone Fork with 8, and he and Bro. Sandgrass a two weeks' meeting at Hazel Dell with 21.

—DEAR FRIENDS:—Thanks for your hearty invitation to come to Stanford. We accept it with sincere gratification and will come at the earliest moment, by the will of God. It will perhaps be sometime in Dec. before we can reach you, but sooner or later, it shall be our joy to revisit you. Ever in Jesus. Affectionately, GEO. O. BARNES.

—Engineer George Ballard, of the Pennsylvania railroad, recently arose in a Jersey City synagogue and said that he desired to embrace the Jewish faith. He said that he had never before professed any religious faith, but that he thought the Hebrew religion to be the most charitable and free from hypocrisy. He was permitted to become a member of the congregation.

Blockade on Civil Service.

I have no sympathy with the civil service law. I voted against some of the abominations contained in the bill and I am proud of it. I want to reform the civil service in the only way that it is just—by a vote of the people. I want everything honest and fair. When the American people declare at the polls that one party shall take charge of the affairs of the country, that party should select from its resources the best talent at its command to administer the government. When the people declare for the democratic party, I believe that the verdict meant that a democrat should fill every office, yes, even the post-offices at the country cross-roads, as well as the office of Postmaster-General at Washington. I am that sort of a civil service reformer who believes that every bad republican officer holder in the country should be put out, and I also believe that every good republican, if such could be found, should also be put out. I believe that the good republican should be put out because I know that an equally honest and capable democrat is infinitely better for the place. I am a democrat and a partisan. I am not a partisan for the sake of party but because I believe the best interests of our country will be subserved through upholding the principles of my party.—(Louisville Speech.)

AN EDITOR'S REWARD.—An editor died and went to the world's crematory. The devil met him with a smile of compassion, and thus shot off his mouth:

"For many long years thou hast borne the blame of the bad spelling that the printers have gotten off in the paper. The paper has gone out for one dollar, but alas! the one dollar has often failed to come in for the paper. The printer has bewailed thee for wages every Saturday night, when thou hadst not one red cent to thy name. Men have taken thy paper without even paying for it and then cursed thee for not sending out a better paper. Thou hast been called a dead-head by the passenger conductors when thou hast shown thy 'annual' to their envious gaze. All these things thou borest in silence. Why comest thou here? Go up higher, thou poor man. An eternity of rest can scarcely requite thee."

Southern women take kindly to journalism. Over fifty are connected with newspapers of the South and on the 31 of next month they propose organizing a Southern Woman's Press Association. In all probability the women of the country will within a few years compete with the men for nearly all journalistic duties. They are quick, intuitive, honest and do not get drunk.

A BIT OF ADVICE.—A woman's paper

gives this bit of information to its readers: There are many women who suppose that on the death of her husband, they will be legally entitled to one-third of the property and rest content. Or if not content, they accept what they suppose will be their legal rights, only to find that when there is no will their "third" means only the use of one-third of the real estate. That is, if the real estate is worth $300, which at 5 per cent. would give her $5 a year, instead of the $100 to use as she pleases. Within a short time we have heard of the surprise and disappointment of several widows who had not asked their husbands to protect them by a will, because of this mistaken idea about their thirds. Just men should see to the matter and by a will should save a wife the double grief for the loss of a husband and of property, independence and comfort.

HOG CHOLERA PREVENTIVE.—A farmer writes: As the hog cholera is so prevalent throughout the country, I want to say that it need never exist. It can be prevented. Construct a long, deep trough; keep it supplied with slack lime, with a reasonable amount of salt, and attract the hogs to it by slopping them there. If this is kept up the hogs will never have cholera, as I have said, and I had several hundred, when my neighbors lost all they had. I would not give a dollar for an insurance against my hogs if I had a thousand, and if farmers will pay attention to these suggestions hog cholera will disappear forever.

Touching the pension business, Speaker Carlisle makes this important statement: They have always been fighting in Europe. We have had a great many wars there. We have had but one war to which we are paying pensions. Yet we are paying to-day for pensions fully one third more than all the other civilized nations of the earth are paying. Our payment of pensions to soldiers and sailors this year will be $76,630,000, while the aggregate payment of all the other nations of the world combined is considerably less than $60,000,000.

Upon my arm she placed her hand, so soft and white, I longed to seize it; would I offend? I took it, and what could I do but gently squeeze it? Her waist was then within my reach, and when so near to me I found it, I spent no precious time in speech, but softly put my arm around it. This brought quite near her ripe, red lips—sweet lips! could mortal man resist? I trembled to my finger tips, and drew them nearer and I kissed 'em.

In a mass meeting at Somerset it was resolved that "We, the people of Somerset and Pulaski county, Ky., hereby tender our most cordial thanks to Mrs. Lula A. Nield for the valuable services rendered in our midst to the cause of temperance; and we take great pleasure in commending her to the State at large as one worthy the highest encomiums, and as a speaker possessing wonderful influence and magnetic power."

In England high treason was once punished by dragging at the horse's tail, through the streets from the prison to the place of execution; or by plucking out and burning the entrails, while the prisoner was yet alive; or by hanging by the neck, so as not to destroy life; also by beheading, quartering and the exposure of the fragments of the body in such places as the King should direct.

The moonshiners say they can stay in jail six months in the year, still three and lost three and make more money thereby than at any other business. They get 75c to $1 a gallon for their whisky, and sell it as fast as they can make it.—(Atlanta Constitution.)

Sir John Sloan, of England, died in 1837. In accordance with his will, 22 rooms in Lincoln Inn Fields have been leased and unoccupied since his death. They will be examined on Nov. 22, as the will provides. Their contents are a mystery.

"Ah, George," she murmured, as they drove along the moonlit road, "am I very dear to you?" And George, as he said a little sum in mental arithmetic, in which a team and his $8 salary largely figured, softly answered, "very dear."

A most astonishing phenomenon of the Japanese earthquake was the splitting of the Papundayang Mountain. In a flash of time it was split into seven parts. Where the lone mountain had stood loomed up seven peaks, each 7,000 feet high.

Indian belles of Alaska wear a thick coating of oil and soot on their faces when not in full toilet. This is said to preserve the complexion, which, after a thorough scrubbing, looks as fair and smooth as a good article of soft-soap.

A single block in the vicinity of Castle Garden, New York, and which is about 125 by 800 feet, contains no less than 35 saloons, or houses where liquors can be obtained.

Speaking of 13 as an unlucky number, how about the original 13 colonies and the nation that has grown from them—anything unlucky about them? Thirteen is not.

GARRARD COUNTY DEPARTMENT.

Lancaster.

—Democrats in this section are feeling mighty good over the defeat of Albert Willis at Louisville Saturday.

—Mrs. Hulce, the temperance lecturer, occupied the pulpit at the Christian church Sunday evening and delivered a forcible sermon to a crowded house.

—Rev. W. O. Goodloe delivered his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning. He has not yet decided where he will make his home in the future.

—Mr. Sam Miller's license does not expire until August 23, 1887. At the Ray House, Hamilton House and the Mason Hotel the licenses expire April 26, February 22 and January 23, respectively.

—Two years ago when the vote on local option was taken in this precinct the majority for license was 147. Saturday the temperance people had a majority for local option of 102, a gain of 249 in two years.

The election Saturday was by far the hottest one ever held in Lancaster. The ladies went to the polls in person and had their lecturers there also. Young ladies walked around the streets singing hymns. In the afternoon when it was known that the movement would be victorious the town went wild. Church bells were rung, drums beaten and a perfect pandemonium reigned. A monster rally meeting was held at the Christian church at night, when a number of speakers addressed the large audience present.

Two ladies, one of whom carried a baby, entered a Boston carpet store and signified their desire to look at some carpets. It was a very warm day, but the salesman cheerfully showed roll after roll until the perspiration literally streamed from every pore of his body. Finally one of the ladies asked the other if she did not think it was time to go. "Not quite," was the answer of her companion, and then in an undertone she added: "Baby likes to see him roll them out and it is not time to take the train yet."

BOURNE!

—FROM WHENCE—

No Traveler Returns Sick!

In these tight times each buyer should consult his own interests. Why should you give one merchant 50c for an article when you can buy the same thing from another for 40c. To do this is not to injure the former, but to benefit himself.

In the next place, you should be sure to get good articles. Poor goods are dear at any price. No where else will you find so many good goods. You might as well pay 50c an ounce for saw dust as to buy inferior medicines.

Bourne has just received his large stock of Medicines of all kinds. Every article fresh from the manufacturers. He now has the finest and cheapest selection of fancy goods, show case articles, etc., of all kinds. Also, a large stock of Spectacles and eye glasses a specialty. The best brands of mixed paints—every can warranted. Splendid Jewelry, sewing machine goods, anglers' goods, art goods, chrome, frames, lamps, brushes, books of all kinds, stationery, a thousand articles for the dear grandma, made a saint and the smartest baby in the business—all at
